This position may be exposed to sensitive or disturbing content.

Position Objective

Undertakes the design, delivery, and continuous improvement of data literacy programs across the agency. The position ensures that learning pathways, training resources, and engagement strategies are responsive to organisational needs, government standards, and emerging trends, ensuring the Western Australia Police Force remains a leader in delivering data driven insights in a policing environment.

Role of Work Unit

The Data Development and Training Unit is responsible for agency-wide strategy, delivering transformation and uplift programs to ensure the agency remains at the forefront with the use of data and data capabilities. The unit will strengthen officers and staff in data literacy and the use of data-driven tools and capabilities to maximise operational outcomes and gain deeper insights into their business. This includes oversight, management, and delivery of training programs, adoption strategies, and readiness initiatives, along with communication and engagement activities that support effective delivery, ongoing performance governance, and reporting. The unit also provides insights to identify capability gaps and inform targeted development, enabling staff and stakeholders to effectively apply data in decision-making, service delivery, and policy development.
